RE: dispute of intellectual property and opposition to ADCE botox filler course submission

Dear Debra Shaffer-Kugel and Board Members,

I want to provide a letter of opposition to Advanced Dental CE's request for approval of their proposed Botox Filler certification program. I am unable to attend the scheduled Board meeting on Friday the 13th of July, 2018 due to travel out of state. I would like to present this letter instead during the open forum for the Boards consideration. As the Board is aware, there is a dispute regarding the course materials. ADCE has used my course materials and have refused to release my materials back to me for my submission. They claim to have provided new material for Board review, however I have never seen these course materials and believe they may have plagiarized some or all of my course material. They also had access to my intellectual property as I solely developed the materials for the initial course submission by ADCE. If they are claiming that their material is new, they would have released my intellectual property back to me, but instead they claim they have authorization to retain my intellectual property. They further fail to correspond with me regarding my requests to return all of my property. At this time legal action must be pursued to ensure protection of my rights and my intellectual property. Once again, I am providing notice to the Board that ADCE's current Botox Filler course submission may contain some or all of my intellectual property; and they do NOT have my authorization to use any content that belongs to myself and may be violating my rights to this material. Please be advised that they have failed to provide to me this material for my review and that legal action will be advanced upon their attempts to misuse this intellectual property.

Sincerely,

Sean Su MD
